

A Day in the Life of a Virtual Student K-2 & 3-5

East China Virtual School gives families the flexibility to create a schedule that fits the lifestyle of the child and the family. Once your child has been assigned to a virtual classroom teacher, you will want to communicate with them which virtual option listed below works best for your child. This will allow our teaching staff and support staff to determine how best to meet the need of your child.

Virtual Option 1, in the chart below, follows a traditional school day closely and also allows for the most “live” whole group and small group interactions with the student’s teacher.

Virtual Option 2 offers flexibility for families, but the “live” interaction through Google Meets is replaced by recorded video of the teacher. All curriculum covered in Option 1 is still made available in Option 2; however, there is no small group instruction.

Collaboration between families and teachers is critical to student success at the elementary level. The teacher will provide lessons and instruction, but elementary students rely on their families when the teacher is not present.

Individualized support services will vary per student, based on student need, qualification and/or certification for services. May include additional time online weekly in addition to the below listed instruction. Special education services and ancillary services will need to take place during the school day, between 8:45-3:00 PM. This may mean students will receive their individualized support services during brain breaks, or during independent learning time.

Student / Family Option 2: Flexibility to Fit Later Start
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • This option is present for families who may need a more flexible schedule for their child’s instructional day. • The early morning Whole Class Google Meet and the mid-morning Whole Class Google Meet will be recorded and posted by the end of the lunch/recess block of time each day. The end of day Whole Class Google Meet will be posted at the conclusion of the school day for families. This will allow families who need to start working on material later in the day to get started at any time after lunch. • It is strongly recommended that the material presented on the schedule above is completed in the order it is presented, regardless of which virtual option works for a given family. • The virtual classroom teacher will be available for consultation during the school day (8:30-3:00).
